

Amy Valentine, CFO SFERRA

Amy Valentine has held senior executive positions in private equity-backed portfolio companies for the past 15 years, working with 5 different PE companies in both consumer and industrial products. For the past 4 years, she has served as CFO of SFERRA, a leader in luxury home products that employs the finest materials from elite mills in Europe to distribute sumptuous sheeting, towels, and other home products. In 2018, the company was sold from Levine Leichtman Capital Partners to Highlander Partners and is poised for continued growth, most recently expanding geographically by opening a new shop within Harrod's in London. Prior to SFERRA, Amy was the VP of Finance at Chromalox, an industry leader in thermal technology products, based in Pittsburgh, PA. During Amy's time at Chromalox, the company experienced global footprint expansion, acquisition, product line expansion, and underwent two successful private equity sales. Prior to Chromalox, Amy held various positions at PPG Industries, a global supplier of industrial coatings, chemicals and glass (NYSE: PPG). Amy has an undergraduate degree from Grove City College and an MBA from the University of Pittsburgh. Amy was named among the top 50 women in business by NJBIZ magazine in 2016, and she was awarded a "40 under 40" award by Pittsburgh magazine in 2014 for professional and civic contributions to the area.
