Lori Reiner is the firm's first Chief People Officer, with oversight responsibility for EisnerAmper's professional development, human resources, talent acquisition, and employee engagement programs. She is focused on elevating team performance in a supportive, inclusive culture as the firm continues to grow, entering new markets and providing innovative resources for clients.

Lori has over 30 years of experience providing accounting, audit and advisory services to closely held and private equity-backed companies. Her industry expertise covers a wide spectrum of clients in large professional and other services companies, which include life sciences, advertising, marketing, staffing, search, technology and other business-to-business service organizations.

Lori has been recognized by several organizations for her professional and personal contributions to the Philadelphia business and local community. Lori was inducted into the 2018 Junior Achievement Philadelphia Business Hall of Fame and received both the 2017 Take the Lead Award from Girl Scouts of Eastern Pennsylvania and Temple University's Fox School of Business Accounting Inaugural Achievement Award in Public Accounting.

In the community, Lori is active in several organizations and serves as a board member of the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, Philadelphia Israel Chamber of Commerce, Committee of Seventy, and the Alliance for Women Entrepreneurs. Lori is a past President of The Forum of Executive Women, and a past Board Member, Finance Committee Member and Audit Committee Chair of Germantown Academy; and served as a board member for both the Jewish Federation of Greater Philadelphia, Board Member and the Women's Philanthropy. Additionally, Lori has long served as a member of the American Heart Association Go Red for Women campaign and as past Chair of the Go Red Executive Leadership Team.

In addition, Lori is a frequent presenter, writer and media source for various business and leadership topics.
