

Tony Buffkin

Director
Charlotte, NC - SouthPark

Overview

As a Director in Dixon Hughes Goodman's State and Local Tax practice, Tony Buffkin has more than 28 years of multi-state consulting experience and works with clients in close collaboration to identify and assess strengths and weaknesses of their sales and use tax function, including sales and use tax calculation and compliance processes, managing sales and use tax audits and evaluating sales and use tax exclusions and exemptions to determine the full extent of their application.

Tony has extensive experience with Tax Technology, Sales Tax Compliance, Nexus Reviews & Voluntary Disclosure, Refund Analysis and Recovery, Audit Preparation and Defense, Tax Planning, Taxability Studies, Process Analysis and Improvement, and Voluntary Disclosure Agreement Negotiation.

He supports many of DHG's largest clients by providing consulting for strategic tax planning, audit defense and controversy, and streamlining of compliance processes.

Prior to entering public accounting, Tony served 12 years with the North Carolina Department of Revenue in audit and management positions, including the Director of Office Services. He was responsible for the department's taxpayer assistance section, bankruptcy, central collections groups, voice response systems and electronic filing programs. As auditor, he became knowledgeable in sales and use tax audits, and led the effort to develop the Department's Computer-Assisted Audit Program.

Previous Big Four experience afforded him the position of National Technical Leader and Southeast Practice Leader for the Sales Tax Systems Practice.

Tony earned the CMI-Sales Tax certification from the Institute for Professionals in Taxation, which is a highly recognized achievement and distinction in the sales and use tax practice area. Tony also holds the Vertex Certified Professional designation.
